College Football Odds: NCAA Betting Lines, Spreads, and Moneylines

It's no surprise that college football is one of the most popular sports in America, and nothing and loyalty the game carries. Combine this with the beauty of amateur sport, from the broad glory, and it's easy to see why NCAA football betting is one of the biggest and most exciting of

Types of College Football Game Bets

You're ready to get in on the action and bet on college football. But first, you need to decide what you're confident it'll be a quarterback shootout, or you think a team will win by more than the how to bet within minutes - There are plenty of options for winning big.

Spreads

A point spread is an amount a team is favored to win by. If a team is projected to win by 10 points that mark or not. Think they'll shatter the opponent? Or will the other team keep it close? Coll among betters.

Moneylines

An NCAA line is a bet that has odds. If you want to pick the winner, no matter the score, college—if the player or team you bet on wins, you'll get paid out. Payouts for moneylines depend on who is favored.

Over / Unders

Also known as Totals, Over / Unders are a bet on a specific statistic of the game. The most common is points. Will it be a high-scoring affair? Or a low-point defensive matchup?

Prop bets

Short for proposition bets, a prop bet isn't usually tied to the final score or outcome. The most common props, where wagers are made on a single player's performance, like how many throwing yards a

There's a wide range of other prop bets you can play on. Everything is up for grabs, from who will have many rushing yards a team will have. You can even bet on what color Gatorade will be poured on the winning team seems too simple, prop bets may be right for you.

Live NCAA Odds

If you want to actively bet during the game, check out live odds. Know who's going to score next drive? Live NCAA odds update with the action, so stay engaged. There's always another bet to selections so far in advance.

Parlays

The most popular futures bet is what team will win the College Football National Championship choose from, such as the winner of the Heisman Trophy.

How Do You Read College Football Odds?

Understanding NCAA football odds is key in picking that winning bet. Don't be overwhelmed by the breakdown to make your next bet easy.

College football lines

In the U.S., NCAA football lines are odds based on a bet of $100.

First, you need to look for the (+) or (-) symbols. The (+) represents the underdog and means that amount. For example, a $100 bet on a +150 underdog will pay out $250 ($150 in winnings). On the other hand, the (-) means you must bet that amount to win $100 since that team is favored. For example, a $150 bet means you must bet $150 to win $100.

So let's say Michigan and Ohio State have an upcoming game, and the moneyline looks like this:

Michigan +120
Ohio State -140

Michigan is the underdog, so if you bet $100 on Michigan and they win, it'll pay $220 ($120 in winnings plus original $100). Ohio State is the favorite, so the payout will be lower. In this example, you'll have to bet $140 to win $100.

It's important to note that the home team is always listed second. So in this example, Michigan is the away team.

It's important to note that even if you think one team will win, if the odds do not reflect what you think the chances of that team winning, you may decide that the wager isn't worth placing.

College football opening lines

The opening line is the initial odds put out for a game. Many see this as the truest and fairest prediction before they alter things based on the betting. However, further in advance means updates, can change before game time.

College football closing lines

The closing line is the final odds before the game. These can be different from the opening line due to suspensions, or lopsided betting.

Spread bets

The spread will have the same (+) or (-) odds. However, you'll also see the spread number.

Michigan +3 -115
Ohio State -3 -105

This means that Ohio State has to give three points since they're the favorites. If they win by more than three points, you win. If they win by three or fewer points, you lose. For example, if you bet $100 on Ohio State, you'll win $205 ($100 in winnings plus original $105 wager) if you wager $105.

Total bets

The most common total bet is the final combined score. You can bet if the total will be over (C

The total score, both teams combined, is projected to be 63 points. It's up to you to decide if it's under 63. Either bet will pay $100 for a $110 wager.

What Are The Biggest College Football Betting Events?

College football presents exciting betting opportunities throughout the course of the season, stakes generally take place from the first weekend in December through the National Championship.

College Football Playoffs

The premier event of the NCAA Football season is the College Football Playoff. The 12 top teams, the top-four seeds earning a bye. The five highest ranked conference champions will automatically qualify, and the other seven teams are determined as at-large bids by the CFP committee.

The opening round will consist of four games, with the four higher seeds hosting those games. The four games will advance to the CFP Quarterfinals against the four teams that received a bye. The four games, will be played at neutral sites. The Quarterfinals generally take place on New Year's Day, taking over some of the rotating New Year's Six Bowls. The four winners of the Quarterfinals will advance to the National Championship, with the two winners advancing to the National Championship.

The National Championship Game concludes the season in mid to late January.

In NCAA Division I football, FBS (Football Bowl Subdivision) and FCS (Football Championship Subdivision) represent the higher level that plays for the National Championship, as well as feature their own playoff tournament to determine their champion.

Conference Championships Games

The top two teams in each of the ten FBS conferences advance to their respective conference championship game on Friday and Saturday during the first weekend in December. Outside of being national championship contenders, these contests carry CFP implications.

Here are the ten conferences that hold a FBS conference championship game:

- American Athletic Conference (AAC)
- Atlantic Coast Conference (ACC)
- Big 12 Conference
- Big Ten Conference
- Conference USA (C-USA)
- Mid-American Conference (MAC)
- Mountain West Conference
- Pac-12 Conference
- Southeastern Conference (SEC)
- Sun Belt Conference

Rivalries

Rivalry games always provide a good spark as a college football fan or bettor. Throw the record into the mix, and you have a rivalry game. These games often take place later on in the season and the impact of the game.

Some of the major rivalries include:

- Florida vs. Georgia
- Notre Dame vs. USC

The Bowls

Teams that don't make the College Football Playoff, but win six or more games, are eligible for the College Football Playoff. There are rare occasions that a team with five wins will be invited to a bowl game if more room is available. These bowl games are usually held in the same location every year and are big events after the regular season.

The biggest bowl games, reserved for the most elite teams, are known as the New Year's Six. Four of these are part of the CFP, while the other two remain a primetime matchup between teams that missed the CFP.

These include:

- The Rose Bowl
- The Fiesta Bowl
- The Sugar Bowl
- The Orange Bowl
- The Cotton Bowl
- The Peach Bowl
